PREFACE.

I HAVE condensed into this little volume a considerable part of the local etymologies contained in "The Origin and History of Irish Names of Places." I have generally selected those names that are best known through the country, and I have thought it better to arrange them in alphabetical order.

The book has been written in the hope that it may prove useful, and perhaps not uninteresting, to those who are anxious for information on the subject, but who have not the opportunity of perusing the larger volume.

Soon after the appearance of "The Origin and History of Irish Names of Places," I received from correspondents in various parts of Ireland communications more or less valuable on the topography, legends, or antiquities of their respective localities. I take this opportunity of soliciting further information from those who are able to give it, and who are anxious to assist in the advancement of Irish literature.

IRISH LOCAL NAMES EXPLAINED.

THE PROCESS OF ANGLICISING.

1. SYSTEMATIC CHANGES.

Irish pronunciation preserved.—In anglicising Irish names, the leading general rule is, that the present forms are derived from the ancient Irish, as they were spoken, not as they were written. Those who first committed them to writing, aimed at preserving the original pronunciation, by representing it as nearly as they were able in English letters.

Generally speaking, this principle explains the alterations that were made in the spelling of names, in the process of reducing them from ancient to modern forms; and allowing for the difficulty of representing Irish words by English letters, it will be found that, on the whole, the ancient pronunciation is fairly preserved.

Aspiration.—The most common causes of change in the reduction of Irish names, are aspiration and eclipsis. Some of the Irish consonants are, in certain situations, subject to what is called aspiration; it is indicated by the letter h, and it always changes the sound of the consonants.

B and m aspirated (bh, mh) are both sounded like v or w, and, consequently, where we find bh or mh in an Irish name, we generally have v or w in the English form: examples, Ardvally in Donegal and Sligo, in Irish Ard-bhaile, high town; Ballinwully in Roscommon, Baile-an-mhullaigh, the town of the summit

(mullach). Sometimes they are represented by f in English, as in Boherduff, Bothar-dubh, black road: and often they are suppressed, especially in the end of words, or between two vowels, as in Knockdoo, Cnoc-dubh, black hill, the same as Knockduff in other places.

For e aspirated see page 4.

D and g aspirated (dh, gh), have a faint guttural sound, not existing in English, and they are consequently generally unrepresented in anglicised names; as in Lisnalee, Lios-na-laegh, the fort of the calves.

F aspirated (fh) totally loses its sound in Irish, and of course is omitted in English; as in Knockanree in Wicklow, Cnoc-an-fhraeigh, the hill of the heath.

P aspirated is represented by f; as in Ballinfoyale, Baile-an-phoill, the town of the hole, the same as Ballinphuill and Ballinphull elsewhere.

S and t aspirated (sh, th) both sound the same as English h; as in Drumbillagh in Cavan and Monaghan, Druim-shaileach, the ridge of the shallows, the same name as Drumsillagh in other counties, in which the original s sound is retained.

Eclipsis.—An eclipsed consonant has its sound altogether suppressed, the sound of another consonant which is prefixed, being heard instead. Thus when d is eclipsed by n, it is written n-d, but the n alone is pronounced. The eclipsed letter is of course always omitted in English.

When a noun is used in the genitive plural, with the article prefixed, its initial consonant is eclipsed. Each consonant has a special eclipsing letter of its own.

B is eclipsed by m; Knocknamoe, the name of a place in Queen's County, represents the Irish Cnoc-na-mbo, the hill of the cows.

C is eclipsed by g; as in Cloonnagashel near Ballinrobe, which ought to have been anglicised Coolnagashel, for the Four Masters write the name Cuil-na-gcaiseal, the corner of the cashels or stone forts.

D and g are both eclipsed by n; as in Mullananalog in Monaghan, Mullach-na-ndéalg, the summit of the thorns or thorn bushes.

F is eclipsed by bh, which is represented by v in English; as in Carrignavar in Cork, which is in Irish Carraig-na-bhfear, the rock of the men.

P is eclipsed by b; as in Gortnaboul in Kerry and Clare, Gort-na-bpoll, the field of the holes.

S is eclipsed by t, in the genitive singular with the article; as in Ballintaggart, Baile-an-tsagairt, the town of the priest.

T is eclipsed by d; as in Lisnadurk in Fermanagh, Lios-na-dtore, the fort of the boars.

2. CORRUPTIONS.

While the majority of names have been modernized in accordance with the principle of preserving the pronunciation, great numbers on the other hand have been contracted and corrupted in a variety of ways. Some of these corruptions took place in the Irish language; but far the greatest number were introduced by the English-speaking people in transferring the words from the Irish to the English language. The following are some of the principal corruptions.

Interchange of l, m, n, r. The interchange of these letters is common in Irish and English, as well as in other languages. We find l very often substituted for r; as in Shrule, Shruel, Struell, Srookhill, in all of which the final consonant sound should be that of r, for they are derived from Sruthair [sruher], a stream.

N is sometimes, but not often, changed to l, as in Castleconnell near Limerick, which is the castle of the O'Connings, not of the O'Connells, as the present form of the name would indicate.

The change of n to r is of frequent occurrence, as in Kilmacrenan in Donegal, which should have been called Kilmacnenan, for the Irish authorities write it Cill-mac-nEnain, which Colgan translates the church of the sons of Enan, who were contemporaries and relatives of St. Columba.

The change of l to r is not very common, but we find it in Ballysakeery in Mayo, which is written by Mac-Firbis, Baile-easa-caoile [Ballysakeely], the town of the narrow cataract.

M and n are occasionally interchanged. For example, the barony of Glenquin in Limerick, should have been called Glenquim, for the Irish is Gleann-a'-chuim, the glen of the cum or hollow. Kilmainham near Dublin is called Kilmannan by Boate, which is more correct than the present form. The name signifies the church of St. Mainen (Irish Maighnenn), who was bishop and abbot there in the seventh century.

Change of ch and th, to f. The guttural sound of c aspirated (ch) does not exist in English, and in anglicised names it is occasionally changed to f; for example, Knocktopher in Kilkenny, is from the Irish Cnoc-a'-tochair, the hill of the togher or causeway. F is also sometimes substituted for th; thus, Tiscoffin in Kilkenny took its name from an old church called Tigh-scoithin [Tee-Scoheen], the house of St. Scoithin, who erected his primitive church here towards the close of the sixth century.

Substitution of g for d. D aspirated is often changed to g; as in Drumgonnelly in Louth, which should have been anglicised Drumdonnelly, for the Irish is Druim-Dhonghaile, the ridge or long hill of the Donnelly's.

Addition of d after n; and of b after m. The letter d is often corruptly placed after n;—as we find in case of Rathfryland in Down, which is called in Irish Rath-Fraileann, Freelan's fort. B is also often placed after m; as in Cumber or Comber, the names of several places in the northern counties; the Irish word is Comar, which signifies the confluence of two waters, and it is correctly anglicised Cummer and Comer in many other names.

IRISH LOCAL NAMES EXPLAINED.

The following abbreviations have been used in quoting authorities for the Irish forms:—

“F. M.,” The Annals of the Four Masters.

“Book of R.,” The Book of Rights (Leabhar-na-gCeart).

“Hy F.,” The Tribes and Customs of Hy Fiachrach.

“O’Dugan,” The topographical Poems of O’Dugan and O’Heeren.

“O’C. Cal.,” O’Clery’s Calendar of Irish Saints, or, The Martyrology of Donegal.

“Wars of GG.,” The Wars of the Gaethil with the Gaill (of the Irish with the Danes).

“Mart. Taml.,” The Martyrology of Tallaght.

The Irish forms are always in Italics. The Irish root words are fully explained in the Vocabulary at the end of the book.

The pronunciation of the principal Irish words is given in brackets, as nearly as can be represented by English letters.

Abbeyfeale in Limerick; Mainistir-na-Feile, the monastery or abbey of the river Feale.

Abbeygormican in Galway; the abbey of the O’Cormaicans.

Abbeylara or Lara in Longford; Leath-rath, F. M. [Lah-rah], half rath or fort.

Abbeyleix; the abbey of the old principality of Leix, so called from a monastery founded there in 1183 by Conor O’Moore. In the reign of Felimy the Lawgiver (A. D. 111 to 119), this territory was given by the king of Leinster to Lughaidh Laeighseach [Lewy Leeshagh], Conall Carnach’s grandson, for helping to expel the Munstermen who had seized on Ossory. Lewy’s descendants, the O’Moores, took from him the tribe name, Laeighis [Leesh], and their territory was called by the same name, now modernized to Leix.

Abbeyshrule in Longford; from a monastery founded there by one of the O’Farrells. It was anciently called Sruthair [Sruher], F. M., i. e. the stream, of which Shrule is a corruption.

Abbeystowry in Cork; the same name as the last. The sruthair or stream from which it was called, gave name also to Bealnashrura (the beal or ford-mouth of the stream) a village situated at an ancient ford.

Irish Local Names explained.

Achonry in Sligo, Achadh-Chonaire [Aha-Conary], F. M., Conary's field.

Adare in Limerick; Ath-dara [Ah-dara], F. M., the ford of the oak tree. A large oak must have anciently overshadowed the old ford on the Maigue.

Addergoole, Addragool, Adrigole, Adrigoole; Eadar-dha-ghabhal [Adragoul], i. e. (a place) between two (river) forks.

Aderrig; Ath-dearg, red ford. See Aghaderg.

Affane on the Blackwater below Cappoquin; Ath-mheadhon, [Ah-vane], F. M., middle ford.

Agha in several counties; Achadh [Aha], a field.

Aghaboe in Queen's County, where St. Canice of Kilkenny had his principal church. Adamnan in his Life of St. Columkille, written in the seventh century, has the following passage, which settles the meaning:—"St. Canice being in the monastery which is called in Latin Campulus bovis (i. e. the field of the cow), but in Irish Ached-bou."

Aghaboy; Achadh-buidhe [Aha-boy], yellow field.

Aghacross near Kildorrery in Cork; the ford of the cross; probably from a cross erected in connexion with St. Molaga's adjacent establishment, to mark a ford on the Funcheon. See Templemolaga.

Aghada near Cork; Ath-fhada [Ahada], long ford.

Aghaderg; Ath-dearg, red ford. See Aderrig.

Aghadoe near Killarney; Achadh-dá-có [Aha-daw-o], F. M., the field of the two yew trees.

Aghadowey in Derry; Achadh-Dubhthaigh [Ahaduffy], O'C. Cal., Duffy's field.

Aghadown and Aghadon; the field of the dun or fort.

Aghadreen, Aghadreenagh, Aghadreenan, Aghadrinagh; the field of the dreens or sloe bushes (draeighean).

Aghafad, Aghafadda; long field.

Aghagallon; the field of the gallan or standing stone.

Aghagower in Mayo; the correct name would be Aghafower, for the ancient form, as found in the old Lives of St. Patrick, is Achadh-fobhair, the field of the spring, from a celebrated well, now called St. Patrick's well. The present form is written in Hy F., Achadh-gabhair, which means the field of the goat.

WORKS BY P. W. JOYCE, LL.D., M.R.I.A.

Books relating to Ireland.

THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF IRISH NAMES OF PLACES.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

Crown 8vo, Cloth gilt. Vol. I., Price 5s. Vol. II., 5s.
(Sold together or separately.)

Fifth Edition.

“To work out the local nomenclature of any country, a man must have a good stock alike of sound scholarship and of sound sense; and Dr. Joyce seems to have no lack of either. . . . We can heartily recommend Dr. Joyce’s book as interesting and instructive to all who care for the study of language and nomenclature, whether they boast of any special Irish scholarship or not.”—The Saturday Review.

“Son œuvre se distingue à la fois par la sûreté de la méthode, et par l’agrément de l’exposition.”—Revue Celtique.

“Dr. Joyce’s work is a real and valuable contribution to science.”—The Academy.

“The book will be a delightful companion to the tourist in Ireland, and will often help him to strike a spark of real poetry out of many an unpromising name of rock or ruin.”—The Athenæum.

“To those who have read the first volume, the simple announcement that a second has appeared will ensure its acceptance and perusal.”—The Scotsman.

“One of the most agreeable pieces of reading that has fallen in our way for many a day.”—The Nation.

“We could fill columns with pleasant fairy tales illustrative of the causes which gave names to places known to every tourist in Ireland.”—Freeman’s Journal.

“He approaches his task in a true scholarly method, his only desire apparently to arrive at the true origin of the word with which he deals.”—Daily Express.

IRISH LOCAL NAMES EXPLAINED.

New Edition.

Fcap. 8vo, Cloth, Price 1s.

In this little book the original Gaelic forms, and the meanings, of the names of five or six thousand different places are explained. The pronunciation of all the principal Irish words is given as they occur.

OLD CELTIC ROMANCES.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GAELIC.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, & Co.

Crown 8vo, Cloth gilt, Price 7s. 6d.

“As for Dr. Joyce's collection of legends, we may say at once that it is extremely fascinating, and gives us a most favourable impression of the author's taste and literary talent”—Times.

“Everyone will be pleased with the Old Celtic Romances, translated from the Gaelic by Dr. Joyce, the author of the well-known volumes on Irish Names of Places.”—Athenæum.

“This charming volume of Irish tales has made its appearance just in the nick of time. . . . We believe Dr. Joyce to have succeeded in rendering the originals into simple and homely English, which will be found to add considerably to the charm of the collection.”—The Saturday Review.

“The quaint romance literature of Ireland has gained an admirable exponent in Dr. Joyce.”—Pall Mall Gazette.

A GRAMMAR OF THE IRISH LANGUAGE, FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS.

Second Edition.

Fcap. 8vo, Cloth, Price 1s.

“Dr. Joyce's little book will be found a thoroughly trustworthy handbook, and quite what it purports to be.”—Athenæum.

“This is an excellent and most opportune little publication. It is intended as a text-book for Irish scholars, and future examinations in the Irish tongue will therefore be conducted according to its rules.”—Freeman's Journal.

“The chapter on Irish Idioms is an absolute novelty, and will be a very great assistance to the student.”—Nation.
